How we ended up here

• The Camino de Santiago, May 2014
  – An incredible success disaster!
• WISE, February 2015
  – Pre-Conference Workshop
  – Meet them where they’re at!
• Study Abroad Provider
  – Learning the language of Millennial and Gen Z students
  – Utilizing Social Media
Gen Y or Gen Z? Elusive and Enigmatic.

GEN Y
- More commonly known as “millenials.”
- Born between mid 1980’s- mid 1990’s
  - There has been some debate to extend this range
- Approximately 75 million members of this cohort
- As of 2010, millennials have outnumbered the baby-boomer generation

GEN Z
- Also known as Gen iZ
- Born between 1995-96 to as late as 2010
- 23 million members - largely kids and adolescents
- Within next five years, they will become the fastest-growing generation in both the workplace and the marketplace.
- In many ways, Gen Z are amplified millennials, and also anti-millenials
Gen Y vs. Gen Z: Anti-Millenial?

Gen Y
- Idealist
- Freedom and Flexibility
- Education and Experience is an Investment
- Text and Email
- Social
- Team
- Helicopter Parents

Gen Z
- Realistic
- Security and Stability
- Cautious with Money and Spending
- Face to Face
- Private
- Individuals
- Parents are Partners

Characteristics:
- Gen Y: Idealist, Freedom and Flexibility, Education and Experience is an Investment, Text and Email, Social, Team, Helicopter Parents.
- Gen Z: Realistic, Security and Stability, Cautious with Money and Spending, Face to Face, Private, Individuals, Parents are Partners.
Gen Y vs. Gen Z: Amplified Millennial?

GEN Y
- Digital Natives
- Inclusion
- Educated
- Short Attention Span

GEN Z
- Air Water Technology
- Diversity Equals Life
- More Educated
- Shorter Attention Span
Gen Y vs. Gen Z: Similarities

- Want to be pioneers, not just have a career
- Want to change the world
- HIGH ACHIEVING
- Wary of faceless corporations
Practically Speaking...

“Technology, it could be argued, may be the single most influential component in the life of a Millennial as two-thirds of Millennials have used a computer before the age of five[13] and many are often quieted at a younger age with DVDs, TVs, smartphones, tablets, or other electronic devices by parents who need a break.” The Millennial Mindset, Luttrell & McGrath

The Word Wide Web significantly impacts a student’s study abroad experience.
“My reality of Cuba I believe was skewed by social media posts and travel documentaries. These posts only reflect the best parts of the country and fail to mention the realities. This country is stricken with poverty, families struggle to live comfortable lives. The daily cuisine, homes they live in, and expectations in life are very different from what I expected. I expected more of a Puerto Rican/Dominican cuisine but their daily food is somewhat bland. The homes they live in are in ruins. Buildings that have not been repaired for decades host entire families. Many people’s goals are not to take advantage of their free education and become doctors, but to enter into other fields that require less work but similar incomes.”

YOLO, FOMO, and YOTO have been popularized and adopted beyond language to become socio-cultural attitudes.
Study Abroad Guilt:
The stress and sensations of guilt that can arise when students feel as though the reality of their study abroad experience is not living up to the perceived expectations or that they have failed.

Practically Speaking...

- Student creates perfect social media of peers who have gone abroad
- Student sees perfect social media of their peers currently abroad
- Student develops expectations and goes abroad
- Student feels guilt and/or shame
- Student does not have idealistic experience &
- Student sees perfect social media of their peers currently abroad

Subversive use of social media

The Daily Selfie – DAY 1

• Randi
• Lives in Havana
• Reupholsters furniture for a living
• Randi had an entire binder full of photos of his work!
Subversive use of social media

The Daily Selfie – DAY 1

• Lázaro
• About my age
• Works at the parking lot near our hotel
• He’s there every day from open to close
The Daily Selfie – DAY 2

- Yordán Martínez, 26 years old
- Born in Havana
- Has two brothers and an uncle who works in the cigar factory
- Studied graphic design in school, but gave it up because it would not be a good career in Cuba

Yandi, 32 years old
Has a 36 year old sister
Drives a bici-taxi for a living, but went to college
Now studies English in a private school
From the countryside near Havana, but loves being in the city where there is more work.
Does not like how expensive Havana can be, however
Waiting for an invitation to go to the US
Calls the US “el país de las marabillas”
Subversive use of social media

The Daily Selfie – DAY 3

• Madriel, 82 years old
• Retired from government job
• Enjoys going to open air markets to pick out the best fruits and vegetables
• Likes to sit and watch cars and people pass by
• Spends time going to fabric stores
• Makes wedding gowns
• Has made wedding gowns for dozens of women, including every younger woman in her family who has gotten married
Pet peeves about social media, or rethinking how we view social media

- SnapChat
- Instagram
- Photo types:
  - The “god pose”
  - Mid-air jump
  - Bathroom mirror...
Time to brainstorm
Student feedback post-travel: POSITIVES of being disconnected

- “I enjoyed having limited internet access.”
- “I was able to really get to know my friends because we weren’t constantly buried in our phones.”
- “It was good to disconnect and enjoy life in the moment, away from the ‘cloud’ but physically on the ground with the people in front of you 100% of the time, not half split between their phone and you.”
- “It allowed you to experience more of what’s going on around you rather than what’s on your screen.
- “It was really nice to not have any clue about what the President Elect was doing at the time.”
Student feedback post-travel: NEGATIVES of being disconnected

- “I wish it would have been possible to share photos instantly with my parents who were so excited to learn everything about Cuba.”
- “It was negative [having limited access] because it didn’t allow for much conversation with my family.”
- “I would have remembered more about [my photos] and my mom would have given me a second opinion. Showing them would force me to more closely look at and decide what to shoot more of.”
- “I wish I could have talked to my friends and family more readily, and perhaps share a few pictures of my day to day experience.”
- “I wasn’t able to stay in touch with my family as much as I’m used to. I usually tell them everything that goes on in my day-to-day life, but that wasn’t the case in Cuba.”
- I would have had a lot more to say while the experience or image was fresh in my mind.”
- “Posting an image or status update in real time is always nice because you get reactions while you’re still excited about it.”
- The advantage of having been able to share my photos would be to keep my friends and family up to date on my whereabouts and assure them that I was safe, as well as to allow them to vicariously enjoy my time in Cuba.”
