Enhancing Intercultural Learning at Home and Abroad

February 7-9, 2018
WINSTON-SALEM, NC
Dear Colleagues,

More than a decade ago a small group of Wake Forest University faculty involved with study abroad identified the need for a forum focused on enhancing the intercultural knowledge necessary to better prepare students for international experiences. Today, the Workshop on Intercultural Skills Enhancement has grown into a global network of professionals and practitioners seeking to expand global understanding in our diverse society.

Wake Forest is currently engaged in a theme year focused on Rethinking Community. In the words of Provost Rogan Kersh, "University graduates enter a society that is more virtual, diverse, polarized, and global than ever before. At a time when meaningful communal bonds are both desperately needed and increasingly frayed, rethinking what it means to be in community is essential."

Our plenary speaker is co-sponsored by the Rethinking Community initiative. Farzana Nayani will set the stage for reframing how we navigate diversity in our own environments. I cannot imagine a better place than WISE to discuss the multiple dimensions of culture and community.

Two groups of people make this conference a reality and make it outstanding. Join me in thanking the Steering Committee for their leadership and keen selection of sessions, as well as the Conference Planning Team for their countless hours overseeing and organizing every single detail.

Wake Forest University is honored to have hosted ten years of WISE, and we are dedicated to offering a viable and relevant assembly focused on intercultural learning for decades to come.

On behalf of the Conference Committee and the Center for Global Programs & Studies, I welcome you to our 10th annual WISE event!

WAKE FOREST UNIVERSITY | 3
Mindfulness & Intercultural Teaching and Learning
FACILITATOR: Tara Harvey, Ph.D.
FULL DAY, 9:00am – 5:00pm

Intercultural education has advanced significantly over the years: initially focusing primarily on immersion, then teaching about cultural differences, to helping participants develop the skills needed to act in interculturally competent ways. While mindfulness has been recognized as an important concept in intercultural communication for some time, until recently few educators incorporated mindfulness practices into their work. However, as mindfulness programs become more prevalent and research heralds their impact, more intercultural educators are recognizing the value of both practicing and teaching mindfulness to enhance their own and others’ intercultural competence.

In this interactive workshop, we will explore what mindfulness is, how it relates to intercultural learning and how practicing mindfulness can benefit you as an intercultural educator as well as your students. You will participate in several activities you can use to start or further your own and your learners’ mindfulness practice.

Dr. Tara Harvey is passionate about helping people learn and grow through international and intercultural experiences. She has been in the international/intercultural education field for more than 15 years — teaching English abroad, advising international students, researching international education, facilitating intercultural training, teaching experience-based intercultural courses, designing curriculum and training fellow educators. Tara has worked at Texas A&M, University of Wisconsin-Madison, University of Minnesota-Twin Cities and as Academic Director of Intercultural Learning at the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE). As founder of True North Intercultural, Tara provides intercultural consulting, training and coaching services to help educators and institutions of higher education facilitate transformative intercultural learning.

GLOBAL SERVICE-LEARNING PEDAGOGY
AND GLOBAL SERVICE-LEARNING PARTNERSHIPS
FACILITATOR: Eric Hartman, Ph.D.

These two half-day workshops are designed to support development or enhancement of community-engaged global learning, domestically and internationally. While these workshops are designed to build on one another, participants may choose to take one or both.

Global Service-Learning Pedagogy
HALF DAY, 9:00am – 12:30pm

How should community engagement be woven into the fabric of course design? How do community-based learning experiences support development of intercultural learning and global civic learning? How can reflection be targeted and systematic? What are the relevant course design principles and processes, and how can they be effectively leveraged across any content area? This workshop will offer structured responses to each of these queries and facilitate integration of global service-learning pedagogy with existing courses and disciplines. Participants are encouraged to bring an existing or draft syllabus.

Dr. Eric Hartman is the Executive Director of the Center for Peace and Global Citizenship at Haverford College. Eric advances a critical understanding of global citizenship through research and practice with global learning and community development. He has written for several peer-reviewed and popular publications including The Stanford Social Innovation Review, International Educator, Tourism and Hospitality Research, and The Michigan Journal of Community Service-Learning. Eric has served as executive director of a community-driven global nonprofit organization, Amizade Global Service-Learning, and taught on human rights, transdisciplinary research methods and globalization in global studies programs at Arizona State University and Providence College. He co-founded both globalsl.org and the global engagement survey, initiatives that advance best practices in global learning and cooperative development within community-campus partnerships.

<td>What do startups in Silicon Valley, K-12 schools, multinational corporations, and study abroad programs have in common? In each instance, we are faced with the challenge of cultivating positive spaces where individuals feel a sense of belonging. How can this be done with the multitude of different layers to identity and communities that each of us belong to? What are the ways to create a sense of “home” for participants to be authentic, engaged, and productive? Implementing purposeful strategy around diversity and inclusion is a must for international programs in any setting. This keynote explores the issues, pitfalls, and best practices that schools, higher education institutions, non-profit organizations, and corporations face in navigating diversity in their own environments. Learning from these examples, what approaches can be implemented at your study abroad program to successfully include all constituents? We will also explore what can happen when your institution doesn’t create inclusive spaces, witnessing what talent, potential, and innovation could be lost. Hear from the firsthand experiences of our keynote speaker who has crossed borders, cultures, industries, and career paths, bringing us an intersectional analysis to help us deeply understand and imagine inclusion for ourselves.</td>

An Intervention to Improve International and Domestic Student Integration and Build Students’ Cultural Agility [HEARN C]

Lead Presenter: Paula Caligiuri, Northeastern University and TASCA Global

This session will present a research study implemented to test a freshman intervention designed to help cultivate friendships between international and domestic students and, in turn, facilitate the development of students’ cultural agility. The intervention, based on the psychological factors affecting relationship formation, was designed for and tested in a First Year Experience (FYE) course. The study employed a fully controlled, experimental design with results suggesting an important role of relationships in forming students’ cultural agility.

Innovative Applications of Attribution Theory: How Perceptions of Cultural Controllability Impact Intercultural Competence and its Development [HEARN D]

Lead Presenter: Louis Hickman, Purdue University
Co-Presenter: Kris Acheson-Clair, Purdue University

In attribution theory, judgments regarding causes impact our affective and behavioral responses. This session will explore how perceptions of the controllability of culture predict empathy and intercultural competence, and how education about the cultural forces that shape individuals can help reverse biases and develop more positive attitudes toward diversity. Evidence from attribution theory and application to intercultural experiences will be presented. Attendees will also take a formative assessment and participate in an experiential activity.

Expand Your Intercultural Development Toolkit [WINSTON]

Lead Presenter: Alyson Hyman, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Co-Presenter: Julia Kruse, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

This interactive session will guide learners through experiential exercises and practices beyond the commonly used intercultural activities. Facilitators from the Global Business Center, Kenan-Flagler Business School will spark creativity and inspire innovation for using these exercises in various professional programs that teach global competencies and learning. Enhance your toolkit for developing intercultural skills in students, faculty and staff with fresh, engaging participatory techniques.

Engaging Students Through Photovoice to Enhance Study Abroad [SALEM]

Lead Presenter: Debbie O’Connell, Winston-Salem State University
Co-Presenters: Will Boone, Winston-Salem State University; Michele Lewis, Winston-Salem State University

In an attempt to create a more meaningful short-term study abroad program, Winston-Salem State University faculty and students completed a photovoice project following a two-week program in Salvador, Brazil. For this project, participants had to submit photos with reflective captions about Bahian life, race, identity, and culture. Presenters will discuss their experiences creating and leading students through this project, including challenges and successes.
1:30pm – 2:45pm

CONCURRENT SESSIONS B

Unpacking Before Packing: Exploring Expectations, Disposition, and Intercultural Self-Awareness in the Pre-Departure Stage [HEARN A]

Lead Presenter: Brianna Dostie, Council on International Educational Exchange
Co-presenters: Sean McIntyre, Council on International Educational Exchange; Ryan Richards, Council on International Educational Exchange

The way students envision the host country is often drastically different from what they encounter on site. Working with students in the pre-departure stage is critical to helping them cultivate a positive disposition toward material and cultural difference. In this session, we share the results of an online pre-departure co-curricular course developed to help students unpack their expectations and assumptions in a supportive and learner-centered environment. Drawing on activities designed to cultivate key intercultural skills, we explore ways to facilitate an attitude shift before students arrive.

Teaching Cross-Cultural Leadership in Overseas Programs [BETHABARA]

Lead Presenter: Michael Steinberg, IES Abroad
Co-presenters: Gemma McGrath, IES Abroad London; Jay Moran, IES Abroad Barcelona

Leadership in the contemporary world involves working across national and cultural boundaries, managing culturally diverse staff, and interacting with representatives of different cultures. International education offers an opportunity for students interested in leadership to grow in cross-cultural understanding and to develop cross-cultural leadership skills. This session focuses on the leadership program at IES Abroad and how faculty members from London and Barcelona approach cross-cultural leadership.

Intercultural Learning and Assessment in Healthcare Education: Are We Achieving Our Goals? [HEARN C]

Lead Presenter: Paula DiBiasio, Elon University
Co-presenters: Heidi Eigsti, Regis University

The integration of Global Learning Experiences (GLEs) in healthcare education is increasing. Are programs meeting administrative goals and achieving predetermined learning outcomes? This session will introduce findings from three multi-site studies examining faculty practices and student outcomes related to GLEs in healthcare education. Information provided may inform faculty practices, future programming, allocation of resources, and engage students in their own learning process.

Co-Curricular Intercultural Programs: Connecting Classrooms with the World [HEARN D]

Lead Presenter: Kris Acheson-Clair, Purdue University
Co-presenters: Sarah Speir, Purdue University

The term co-curricular has come to mean everything other than coursework. To promote co-curricular engagement in its ideal form, this session presents two examples of truly co-curricular intercultural programs designed to intentionally connect what students learn in their coursework with learning opportunities outside the classroom. Organized around the Association of American Colleges & Universities (AAC&U) Valid Assessment of Learning in Undergraduate Education (VALUE) Rubric for Intercultural Knowledge and Competence, these programs include a mandatory series of cultural events and an intercultural teamwork certificate partially integrated into required courses.
1:30pm – 2:45pm

The Framing of Diasporic Histories in Cuba and the United States: Experiential, Pedagogical, and Theoretical Approaches to Transnational Race Relations [WINSTON]

Lead Presenter: Geoffroy de Laforcade, Norfolk State University
Co-Presenters: Bre’Yon Brown, Mott Hall IV Intermediate School, Brooklyn, NY; James Brownsmith III, Black Line Promotions and Advertising; George Williams, Diversity Global

This session will present the pedagogical outcomes of successive study abroad and service-learning programs developed by Virginia’s largest public HBCU, Norfolk State University, in Cuba. It focuses on the ways in which understandings of diaspora history, race and discrimination by participants in both countries altered their shared approaches to societal transformation. The panel will explore the experiential learning of African-American and Latinx youths and their Cuban hosts, and its practical outcomes for civic engagement in both countries, as well as its significance for curricular transformation and new research opportunities in History and Interdisciplinary Studies.

Supporting International Student Identity Development Through Campus Engagement [SALEM]

Lead Presenter: Lesley Robinson, St. Edward’s University

As international students arrive on campus, their adjustment often includes unique stressors not experienced by U.S. students. Highlighting how international students can make meaning of their identity, participants will learn best practices to build collaborations with campus partners to support international student identity development through engagement.

2:45pm – 3:15pm

AFTERNOON COFFEE BREAK [HEARN FOYER]

3:15pm – 4:30pm

CONCURRENT SESSIONS C

Cultivating Intercultural Competence in MBA Programs [HEARN A]

Lead Presenter: Janet Bennett, Intercultural Communication Institute
Co-Presenters: Iris Berdrow, Bentley University; Amy Wallis, Wake Forest University School of Business

Intercultural competence is an essential learning outcome of MBA programs around the world. Exploring the full breadth of the spectrum - from assessment to program development to increased competency to relevancy in the workforce - this presentation digs into the links and gaps between best practices and practical applications of intercultural competency initiatives.

The Impact of Reverse Narnia on Student Re-entry: Helping Students Prepare for Reverse Culture Shock [BETHABARA]

Lead Presenter: Stephen Bray, Elon University
Co-Presenter: Katherine Hill, Elon University Alumna

We know students returning from a study abroad experience can struggle to reorient themselves upon returning to their home culture. In this session, we will discuss why students struggle and provide a new way of understanding this struggle, what we call Reverse Narnia. Participants will leave with concrete ideas for helping students both before and after departure, and a richer understanding of how students conceive of their return.
Conference Day 1 [THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8]

3:15pm – 4:30pm
Building Interculturality: Link Language and Culture with Can-Do Statements [HEARN C]
Lead Presenter: Ali Moeller, University of Nebraska-Lincoln & American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL)
What is the proof that learners can use their new language to build intercultural competence? Can-Do Statements clarify what it takes to move from one proficiency level to the next, ideal for guiding educators’ instruction and assessment and learners’ focus on how to reach their language and intercultural communication goals. Participants will experience tasks that develop and assess learners’ intercultural communication as they demonstrate interacting in conversations; understanding what is heard, read, or viewed; and creating written and spoken messages.

4:30pm – 6:00pm
Conference Reception [HEARN FOYER]
Hosted by Wake Forest University Provost’s Office of Global Affairs

Digital Storytelling: A Pathway to Intercultural Reflection [HEARN D]
Lead Presenter: Heather Gregg Reed, Institute for Study Abroad – Butler University
Digital Storytelling uses participatory media for reflection, education, and social change. This session will explore the uses of Digital Storytelling as part of the intercultural learning process. Examples of student engagement and completed stories will be shared, and participants will leave the session with an understanding of how to implement Digital Storytelling for their own purposes.

International Student Adjustment to U.S. Universities: The Role of Intercultural Skills [WINSTON]
Lead Presenter: Nelson Brunsting, Wake Forest University
Co–Presenters: Megan Mischinski, Wake Forest University; Frank Fang, Wake Forest University; Wenjin Wu, Wake Forest University
Join international students at Wake Forest University as they present their research on international student academic, cultural, social, and emotional adjustment to U.S. universities. This session will explore the current research through the lens of first-year international students and draw on audience knowledge as well.

Motivating Students to Participate in Intercultural Activities While Abroad: An Introduction to the Echelon Intercultural Program [SALEM]
Lead Presenter: Seth Fisher, IES Abroad Paris French Studies Center
This interactive session will present a program developed for short-term, faculty-led, and semester-long study abroad programs that uses social theories to build a community of students motivated to participate together in language immersion, activities facilitated by staff and professors, and independent intercultural activities to increase students’ intercultural competencies. Attendees will discuss methods to motivate students to participate in intercultural activities and ways to encourage them to escape the American bubble.

Conference Day 2  [FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 9]

8:00am – 1:00pm  REGISTRATION  [HEARN FOYER]
8:00am – 9:00am  CONTINENTAL BREAKFAST  [HEARN FOYER]

9:00am – 10:15am  CONCURRENT SESSIONS D

An Ubuntu-Integrationist Approach to Undergraduate Research and Intercultural Learning in a Short-Term Study Abroad Program  [HEARN A]

Lead Presenter: Prudence Layne, Elon University

This interactive session explores ways of incorporating meaningful research into an undergraduate, short-term study abroad program. Leaning on an Ubuntu philosophical approach, participants will examine strategies for integrating research into every stage of the study abroad process, from application to reentry, to foster intercultural learning.

Turning Resistance into Engagement: Training Design for Transformative Learning  [BETHABARA]

Lead Presenter: Janet Bennett, Intercultural Communication Institute

Whether our programs are directed at domestic (glocal) or international (global) engagement, we often face participants who express resistance to various intercultural topics. This resistance may relate to either the subject matter or to the methods we use. By learning to recognize the many patterns of resistance, and their reasons, we can learn to finesse our learners’ reticence into a more full engagement with intercultural learning.
9:00am – 10:15am  Bridging the Communication Gap: Script-Based Language and Culture for Non-Language Programs
Lead Presenter: Rebecca Thomas, Wake Forest University

This session is aimed primarily at leaders of non-language intensive programs traveling to non-English speaking countries. The presentation demonstrates the value of acquiring even minimal linguistic knowledge with locally specific cultural scaffolding in situations where higher levels of proficiency cannot practically be attained or expected. Participants will be exposed to a mini-course in “survival language and culture” designed for students and facilitators with little to no prior experience with the target language. Presenter will share ongoing research supporting the efficacy of the method on cultural adaptation.

Best Practices for Developing International Service-Learning Programs
Lead Presenter: Evan Small, Elon University
Co-Presenter: Elizabeth Coder, Carnegie Mellon University Qatar

This presentation will introduce participants to best practices used in service-learning. An overview to service-learning will be presented with special attention paid to developing sustainable and mutually beneficial partnerships with community organizations. Participants will leave with tools to assist them in developing, maintaining, and assessing effective community partnerships.

Overcoming Institutional Resistance to Intentional Intercultural Skills Enhancement
Lead Presenter: Katherine Yngve, Purdue University
Co-Presenters: Michael Brzezinski, Purdue University; Linda Stuart, AFS Intercultural Programs

Facilitators will guide a pair-share discussion using a five-stage model to shed light on resistance to organizational change, for institutions struggling to identify the reasons to invest in intentional intercultural learning interventions (for study abroad or on-campus contexts). They will present models of successful institutional change; then guide the group in co-creation of action plans through shared experiences, brainstorming, and debrief.

---

The Influence of Internship Abroad Experiential Design on Cultural Intelligence
Lead Presenter: Lisa Lambert Snodgrass, Purdue University

A recent study that examined the influence of internship abroad experiential design on cultural intelligence will be presented. The research examined whether participants experienced growth in cultural intelligence after the implementation of the critical culture program design and implementation of the Live-Learn-Work model. This interactive session will incorporate praxis (dialogue, reflection, action) and offer attendees curricular and program design strategies as well as actionable items for grounding that design in theory.

10:15am – 10:45am  MORNING COFFEE BREAK
HEARN FOYER
10:45am – 12:00pm  CONCURRENT SESSIONS E

Understanding Student Resistance to Cross-Cultural Engagement  [HEARN A]

Lead Presenter: Porshè Chiles, Wake Forest University
Co-Presenter: Carla Fullwood, University of North Carolina at Greensboro

As institutions make strides to create more inclusive campuses and prepare students to be global citizens, there are challenges with supporting the needs of all students across cultures, identities, and experiences. As universities continue to incorporate cross-cultural and inclusive initiatives, they are often met with student resistance. This interactive session will explore cross-cultural engagement initiatives and literature to unpack why students are resistant to these approaches. The presenters will share tools and strategies to understand and address resistance on our campuses.

Effects of Institutional Structures and Student Characteristics on Patterns of Student Global Learning Choices: A Multi-Institutional Analysis  [BETHABARA]

Lead Presenter: Iris Berdrow, Bentley University
Co-Presenters: Laura Boudon, Florida International University

How do student choice patterns of global learning experiences vary by institutional characteristics? We will present results of our research across six institutions on global learning experiences, institutional structures, and student choices. We have two hypotheses: global learning is a cumulative process wherein students who engage in one type of activity will then be more likely to engage in additional learning opportunities indicating global learning integration, and institutional processes and structures impact student choice patterns.

Dismantling the “U.S. Versus International” Dichotomy: Creating Synergy between Intercultural and Diversity/Social Justice Approaches  [HEARN C]

Lead Presenter: Amer F. Ahmed, University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Intercultural approaches often engage international and global efforts while diversity and social justice tend to be applied in U.S. contexts. As the trends of globalization accelerate, there are missed opportunities due to the lack of synthesis of these approaches. This dichotomy often prevents us from understanding the relationship between local and global factors that impact our efforts. In this session, participants will learn a synergistic approach adapted to 21st Century challenges in order to address inequity and intercultural issues in a variety of contexts.

Virtually Effective: Immersive Technologies for Intercultural Leadership Development  [HEARN D]

Lead Presenter: Mesut Akdere, Purdue University
Co-Presenters: Kris Acheson-Clair, Purdue University

Join us as we explore the relatively uncharted territory of virtual and mixed reality in developing non-linguistic intercultural leadership competencies—empathy, openness, and curiosity. Participants will experience intercultural interventions that use immersive technologies. They will see how we combine traditional evaluation methods with cutting-edge biometric techniques that use non-invasive devices to monitor involuntary biological indicators of emotion and engagement.
Beyond Study Abroad: Developing Global Competencies from Orientation to Graduation

[ WINSTON ]

Lead Presenter: Julia Kruse, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Co-Presenter: Alyson Hyman, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

UNC Kenan-Flagler Business School’s Global Education Model and Inclusive Global Leadership curriculum represent a strategic approach to global competency training that can be replicated at other institutions. Presenters from the Global Business Center share the model that identifies global and intercultural competencies as learning outcomes, the systematic curriculum that starts with orientation and ends with graduation, and examples of innovative intercultural training topics and techniques. Participants are asked to discuss their best practices in advancing intercultural skills and draft a mini-action plan to apply the new insights at their institutions.

Uncovering Value in Fostering Intercultural Friendships During Orientation

[ SALEM ]

Lead Presenter: Sophie Delfeus, Augsburg University

This session presents research on the ways co-curricular programming can help increase intercultural skills in study abroad students during orientation within a host country. How can innovative program design enhance intercultural learning? Join us for an engaging discussion based on the presentation of a recent case study.

Best Practices for Intercultural Training of On-Site Staff and Program Leaders

[ HEARN A ]

Co-Presenters: Amy Garwood-Díaz, University of Minnesota; Lindsey Lahr, University of Minnesota

It is important that on-site staff and instructors are able to articulate the importance of intercultural competency to their students. The University of Minnesota Learning Abroad Center has developed specific training modules that tackle this endeavor. This session will demonstrate successful intercultural learning and training for on-site staff and leaders of instructor-led programs abroad. Participants will take away methods and resources to facilitate conversations on intercultural learning in their context.

Make a Lasting Mark by Crossing Borders with First-Year Students

[ BETHABARA ]

Lead Presenter: Susie Duke, Grinnell College
Co-Presenters: Tara Grischow, Wake Forest University; Kelia Hubbard, Wake Forest University; Jon Smart, Wake Forest University

First-year students are primed for intercultural learning when it is infused into the curriculum in a broad and cohesive way. This session will present two first-year student programs: the Global Learning Program at Grinnell College and Global Connections at Wake Forest University. These are two distinct first-year student experiences that can influence the way young learners navigate their academic, professional, and social paths, leaving them with a lasting sensitivity to cultural diversity.
1:30pm – 2:45pm

It Takes a Village: Developing and Maintaining Effective International Education Study Abroad Programs [HEARN C]

Lead Presenter: Michael Putman, University of North Carolina at Charlotte
Co-Presenter: Erik Byker, University of North Carolina at Charlotte; Adriana Medina, University of North Carolina at Charlotte

This session will describe development and outcomes of two study abroad programs (South Africa and Germany). Presenters will share information and facilitate a discussion of the organizational facets necessary for study abroad programs, including: student experiences, partnerships with other universities, the internal and external support systems, and the alignment of the study abroad experience with programmatic goals.

Activities for Facilitating Intercultural Learning [HEARN D]

Lead Presenter: Evan Small, Elon University
Co-Presenter: Elizabeth Coder, Carnegie Mellon University Qatar

This interactive session will present a variety of activities designed to introduce and discuss various topics and skills for intercultural learning. Participants experience the activity, then reflect on how they might implement it in a variety of learning environments. Activities will include reflective writing prompts and group processing activities. Participants will leave with tools to incorporate intercultural learning in an experiential context and to help students reflect on and make meaning of their experiences.

The Ethics of Study Away and Study Abroad [WINSTON]

Lead Presenter: Nina Namaste, Elon University

Participants will review Mick Vande Berg’s three core narratives for study abroad, then actively discuss the multi-layered and intertwined ethical dimensions related to study away. Participants will strategize small, feasible changes to be a part of a larger cultural shift toward more intentional, integrated, scaffolded intercultural learning for all international and domestic off-campus experiences.

The Intercultural Workshop for 350 Engineering Students, 24 Nationalities, 15 Languages [SALEM]

Lead Presenter: Anne O’Mahoney, The Institut Supérieur de l’Aéronautique et de l’Espace (ISAE) Supaero

Learn how the Humanities Department implemented a compulsory intercultural workshop for Graduate Aerospace Engineering students through a unique program design. We will share creative classroom content and gather ideas from participants on how we can all go further and be more daring in the teaching and learning of intercultural awareness.

2:45pm
CONFERENCE CONCLUDES
Speaker Biographies

Kris Acheson-Clair, Ph.D. is Associate Director of Intercultural Pedagogy & Scholarship at Purdue University. With nearly two decades of teaching experience and extensive publications related to intercultural communication, she has brought many innovations and the capacity to scale up impact to CILMAR, Purdue’s new Center for Intercultural Learning, Mentorship, Assessment, and Research.

Amer F. Ahmed, Ed.D. serves as Director of Intercultural Teaching and Faculty Development at University of Massachusetts Amherst, Faculty at the Summer and Winter Institutes for Intercultural Communication, and member of SpeakOut: Institute for Democratic Leadership and Culture.
