

Student Organization Residential Block Request Form

Residence Life and Housing and Campus Life at Wake Forest University acknowledge the common desire of students to live with other students who share similar interests. While these commonalities can be formed around many interests, including having lived together in the first-year residence halls, often students desire to live with other students in a student organization in which they are participating. Since student organizations facilitate community and leadership growth, recognized student organizations which have a mission and purpose that is supported by living in community can request a housing block in non-freshman residence halls. The initial block size and further increases or decreases are determined by a number of factors, but chief among those factors is stability, sustainable size, and the positive contributions of the group to the residential community.
